Grade 4 – General and Special Education

Intended Audience

Students in a fully inclusive fourth grade social studies class are the audience of the lessons and the play. Reading levels of the students range from Primer – Grade 8. Fourth grade is the first time the students receive explicit daily social studies education. These lessons meet state objectives in both language arts and social studies. The readers’ theater play was designed to help emergent readers expand vocabulary and develop fluency as well as teach social studies. Readers’ theatre differs from traditional plays in that the focus is on the oral reading of the play. Sets, costumes, and placement of actors is not addressed. The activities that precede the play were designed to specifically hone nonfiction reading skills and strategies.

Prior to Instruction

Education does not take place in a vacuum, thus, it is important to interweave instruction across content areas. Prior to the execution of the following activities, the following will have taken place:

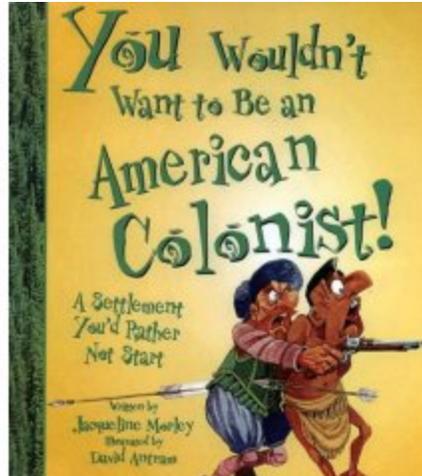

- Read aloud Revolutionary War on Wednesday by Mary Pope Osborne
Historical fiction at a grade 3 reading level to familiarize the students to the events that will be studied more in depth.

- Practice “Wonderous World” to refresh the seven continents and four oceans.
- Practice “Government Song” to review the functions of the four branches.

Part 1: Geography

1. Review “Wonderous World” geography song.
2. Atlas Scavenger Hunt using Appendix A in heterogeneous partners
3. Read You Wouldn’t Want to Be an American Colonist! By Jacqueline Morley and Illustrated by David Antram to familiarize students with advantages and disadvantages of settlement in the New World.

- Review pages 16, 22, 24, 26, 28 on color transparencies on the overhead using “Nonfiction Structure Time.” “Nonfiction Structure Time is a chant in which the students echo the teacher and is modeled after “Peanut Butter Jelly Time!”:

Teacher

“Nonfiction structure time!”
 “Richard!”
 “Bernstein!”
 “What is?”
 “A subheading?”

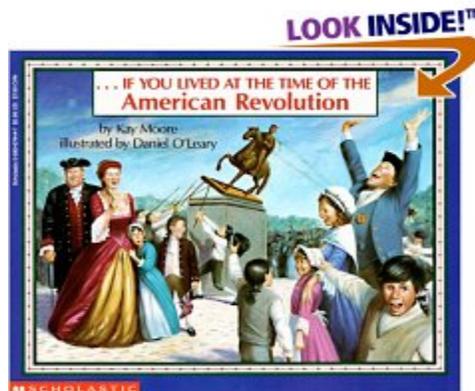

Students

“Nonfiction structure time!”
 “Richard!”
 “Bernstein!”
 “What is?”
 “A subheading?”

The student responds using the nonfiction text on the overhead and the chant continues. Refer to appendix B for other nonfiction text features.

Part 2 – Daily Life in the Colonies and the Seeds of

- Obtain a class set of If You Lived at the Time of the American Revolution by Kay Moore and illustrated by Daniel O’Leary.

- Read pages 12-13 as a whole class.

3. Complete nonfiction graphic organizer (Appendix B) for pages 14 – 23 in heterogeneous groups.
4. Jigsaw groups and each group must summarize one of the following sections: pages 14-15; pages 16 – 17, or pages 18-22. This will allow students to practice the skill of summarizing with familiar text. Use Appendix C for summaries.
5. Reconfigure students into heterogeneous groups. Assign each group one of the following section to summarize: Pages 32-33; pages 41-42; page 45; pages 46-47; pages 50-51; page 52; pages 54 – 56; page 57; pages 74-77, pages 77 – 79.
6. Students use summaries to independently complete activity sheet (Appendix D).

Part 3 – Reader’s Theatre Play

1. Have students read through play in partners and list their top three choices for a part.
2. Read through the play several times and discuss accordingly.
3. Highlight new vocabulary and create a personal glossary.
4. Perform play for a younger grade.
